

Dear All,

As our production of Snow White has now come to an end, I just wanted to send a quick note to you all to give my heartfelt thanks for supporting this year's ballet production. Without your support we wouldn't be able to provide the students with these wonderful performance opportunities. From taxiing your children to and from rehearsals, giving up your Sunday's, and all the additional little things that family and friends do to enable students to be involved is really appreciated, both by myself, the Director's Alison and Pete, and the rest of the Centre Stage team.

I also wanted to let you know how professional, hardworking and motivated your children have all been during this process; from the 6 hour rehearsals, coming to additional classes throughout the week, home practice and the focus and commitment they showed during the final few days at the theatre. They have been an absolute joy to be around, and have made me incredibly proud of them and proud to be their teacher.

I have had so many positive comments from our staff who assisted backstage telling me how well behaved, caring, kind and professional the students were (from the youngest to the eldest). As well as wonderful feedback on their performances, they were all stars, it's always so wonderful to see all the hard work come together (and makes the stress worth it). Weekends like this are why I love my job.

There is nothing better as a teacher than seeing the shyest of children glow with confidence on a stage and the beaming smiles on all their faces as the curtain closes. As I always tell my students, it's not about being the best technical dancer, it's about loving what you do and letting others see that.

A BIG thank you for all my beautiful flowers, gifts and cards, and for the lovely feedback emails I've received since the show. I am extremely grateful and very touched. :-)

It's been a very busy few months with the RAD exams and then straight into the show, so I hope you all enjoy a calmer end to the term/year with your Sunday's back (I've forgotten what people actually do with Sunday's off!)

Now to start planning ahead for next year, I'm looking forward to another wonderful year with my ballet beans.

Best Wishes,
Ms Megan

P.S

Classes continue as normal until Saturday 6th July, and the new academic timetable has been sent out and will also be handed out in class this week. If your child has taken their exam this year they will be moving up to the next level. If your child did not sit the exam or has recently joined, I will be emailing out later this week informing as to which class they will be in as of August 2019. (We are still waiting for the exam results, but as soon as we get them I will be in touch).
