Outside The headmasters Office

A: Hi – What are you here for?

B: I don't know? – I haven't done anything wrong!

A: Yeah! Me neither! – So unfair!

B: Yeah! So unfair!

A: It's nothing to do with you breaking that window is it?!

B: No! ....Well maybe?....well I mean that wasn't my fault, well not really.

A: I heard you threw/kicked that ball in to the headmasters office.

B: Well I did, but it was an accident! Stupid place to have a window.

A: Yeah! But what were you doing with the ball there, It's out of bounds for ball games

B: I know, but I had to get the ball from the seniors for netball/football practice they weren't meant to be there and the seniors wouldn't let me have the ball.– then I told them to throw it to me – they threw it, I tried to catch it and missed and it just went through my fingers and through the window! When I looked round the seniors had scarpered leaving me trying to get the ball – and the Headmaster looking very cross.

A: Doesn't look good for you! He'll never believe you over the seniors and especially those school captains and prefects

B: I know! ...That's the problem. What about you? Are you here for cheating in that exam?

A: No! Well not really ...it wasn't me you see. I was just passing a note from the back to smiggy at the front and I was the one that got caught. The note said "tell me the answers" – It looked like my writing and no one admitted to it. Even though I told Mrs Sutton it wasn't me she didn't believe me cos the week before I'd sent round a funny joke about her frizzy hair and socks and sandals and got in to real trouble for that. She's had it in for me since then.

B: You don't want to get on the wrong side of her I can tell you. If she doesn't like you, you're in big trouble – She's a real witch!

A: & B: Yeah! (Door to Headmasters office opens they both look up!) A: Oh Mrs Sutton!

B: Headmaster!

Both stand up and look at each other and say to each other

A & B Good Luck!
