

JACK & THE CATALYSTS

When 11 year old Jack is struggling to revise for his science test he calls on his friend the Catalysts to come and give him a hand. These dozen or so science boffins have no problem helping him understand forces, the planets and the solar system, friction, gravity, pressure, speed and much more!

Jack and the Catalysts is the first in a highly successful series of four plays which Tring Park school regularly tour around Hertfordshire and Buckinghamshire primary schools in the UK. All of the plays are written by the school's Director of Drama, Edward Applewhite, and include Key Stage 2 (Primary) science subjects. This particular play is suitable for year 3 to 6 (7-11) but has been performed to younger pupils too. It contains songs and audience participation, presenting science in an informative and entertaining way.

Testimonials:

"There is always an air of excitement in school when Tring Park's T.I.E. show is announced. As a teacher I know that by the end of the energetic, interactive show the children will have absorbed a vast amount of scientific knowledge from a fun and exciting dramatic performance. The downside? Will any of us ever stop singing that catchy song?"

"Tring Park's T.I.E. show is a highly energised, full packed, interactive science adventure which took our children on an amazing educational journey, which they loved! As teachers, we were amazed (and grateful) by the amount of scientific knowledge the children had absorbed and how excited they were to talk about the play and new knowledge on subsequent days. Definitely worth seeing!"
