

(The Kickball Queen of the World)

(Stephanie comes running on stage shouting.)

I am the kickball queen of the world! You guys should've seen me. I kicked four homeruns in a single game. (Chanting) I am queen! I am queen! Do you know how to play kickball? It's like baseball only instead of using a bat you use your feet. It's harder than it looks. See, today at the playground, a bunch of high school kids came over and laughed at us for playing kickball. They said it was a sissy game. So I said "Yeah? Well this sissy (pointing to herself) can beat you anytime, any day." And they were like "Yeah. Right." So they played us in a game. They didn't have a chance. I got all the middle school kids and we beat them 22 to 7! And that's counting my four homeruns. I am the kickball queen of the world! I wonder if they have kickball in the Olympics?

(You Got to Kiss a Lot of Frogs to Make a Prince)

(She enters kissing a frog.)

Come on! Come on! Turn into a prince. (Kissing it again) What's wrong with you? Now look, I'm a princess and I've got better things to do than sit here all day kissing a toad. Come on! I was in the woods and I saw that old ugly witch . . . what's her name? You know, the one with the warts. Anyway she turned you from a handsome prince into this toad. And everyone knows the only way you can turn back into a boy is for a beautiful princess to kiss you. And if I know one thing, I'm beautiful. (Kisses him again.) Oh, come on! The big ball is in a couple of hours and I need a date.

That's the worst thing about being a princess. All the guys are scared to ask me out. They're scared that if they do something stupid on the date, I'll have their heads cut off. Ok, I only did that one time. I don't understand why you're not changing into a prince. Let me look into my princess handbook to see if I'm doing this right. (Turning pages of book.) Let's see—"How To Weave Straw Into Gold"—"How To Catch A Man With One Glass Slipper"—here it is—"How To Change A Frog Into A Prince." (Reading) Kiss it! That's what I'm doing. Wait, there's more. Warning: Make sure the frog is NOT a toad. Toads never turn into a prince. They just cause warts and make you look like witches. Uh oh, I'm in trouble!
